1. General data

Project summary:

Project summary
In line with the objectives of this call for proposals (SOCPL-2021-IND-REL), the REJenerAXion project aims to analyse and strengthen the role of innovative industrial relations structures, including social dialogue, in contributing to a "socially just transition" to clean energy, taking into account the objectives of the European Green Deal, also in the framework of the Recovery and Resilience Plans. To achieve this goal, the project intends: i) to study the transformations taking place in the energy sector oriented towards clean energy and sustainability and their impacts for working conditions and quality-of-work issues, employment structures, sectoral, territorial and regional, and socio-environmental levels; ii) to increase expertise on these topics of the social partners and concerned stakeholders through the analysis and exchange of experiences and best practices of industrial relations and social dialogue for a just energy transition at national and European level, identifying convergences and divergences, as well as drivers and barriers, in a number of very significant European Member States involved in the project; iii) to identify practical recommendations for addressing the challenges of the clean-energy transition and to strengthen the role and contribution of industrial relations systems and social dialogue for a just transition to green energy at national and European level. The project will analyse these changes focusing on eight countries in order to compare experiences and trends from North, South, Central and Eastern Europe: Belgium, Germany, France, Italy, Spain, Poland, Slovakia and Hungary, to have a transnational dimension balanced between old and new member states and different industrial relations systems.
